THE SEWER LEVY

The one mill sewer levy, which would permit the city to carry out a general sewer project already started, goes before the voters of Salem for a second time tomorrow. In the August primary election it was sanctioned by a majority of the voters but lacked a few votes to reach the 65 per cent majority required by law.

There are so many reasons why this levy should pass that one wonders just what would prompt any citizen to vote against it. Its first objective is to complete the Broadway sewer project, halted by lack of funds. The section from the county ditch up Broadway to Aetna street is completed, but the flooding of the industrial area cannot be checked unless this sewer is continued up Broadway to Franklin, west to Filbert street and north on that street to connect with the Gahanna sewer.

That much of the program alone should be sufficient to command a passing vote for the levy. But this sewer project is far-reaching, planned to benefit every section of the city. Other steps in the program contemplate relief for the east end, for the downtown business district, for the Buttermilk Run section and a fourth, for that area around the Electric Furnace plant.

City council did a thorough job of planning this sewer project so as to relieve all sections which have been flooded for many years, as well as to divert storm water from sanitary sewers—a part of the program which will improve sanitary conditions during flood periods and take much of the load from the disposal plant. It is the first municipal project of any magnitude which in recent years has been set up as a complete program, instead of being done in piecemeal fashion.

The entire project is expected to cost about $140,000, but more than $100,000 of that amount will be represented by federal funds. The cost to the city is only a few thousand dollars. It is worth one mill for two years to every property owner and resident of Salem.

CITY HALL DOOMED

Salem's nearly century-old city hall and relic of Abolitionist meeting days seems to be doomed. After having been condemned many times for several years, it seems destined to meet the fate of the old county jail, which went through the same series of condemnation proclamations before it finally was doomed by an order of the state fire marshal.

Few in Salem were surprised when the fire marshal served notice that the old frame municipal building must be razed within 30 days. For a long time it has been looked upon as a fire trap, to say nothing of the danger of its falling down. It has served its days of usefulness and nothing much can be done about it, except to replace it with a modern fire-proof building.

But all that is not so simple as it may sound. Neither is it a matter which can be determined within the short period of 30 days. The state fire marshal no doubt realizes that and would be willing to grant an extension of time if he were assured plans for replacing it were under way. To comply with the state's order would mean seeking office space in other buildings and a temporary housing of the police and fire departments. Where to go is a big problem, and how to pay the rent is another. It will cost money to raze the old structure and considerably more money to build a new one. First of all, the voters would have to approve a bond issue to finance all this. And they are not likely to give that approval until they know what kind of a building is to be constructed.

It will be recalled that several complications arose a few years ago when a bond issue for this purpose was submitted to the voters. There were those who thought the new building should not be on the main street because of the danger and inconvenience when fire trucks answered a call. However, that offered a problem to those proponents because, if vacated, the site of the present building would revert to the original owners—the Society of Friends.

Another group thought this situation could be remedied by building a municipal office building on the present site and a fire station on another site off the main street. Objections were raised to this suggestion on the basis of the extra overhead expense of maintaining two buildings. And some even voted against the issue because they were not assured that the historic building would be moved to Centennial park, or otherwise preserved.

Now that the state fire marshal seems to mean what he says, something will have to be done about it—some time. And when the question of replacing the old building comes up for public discussion, one may as well sit back in his easy chair and be prepared for the same complications which arose a few years ago.

WAR BY WEBSTER

National reluctance to face the fact that the United States and Germany are at war has been deprived of its last excuse. The Reuben James, a destroyer in the United States battle fleet which is being used to sink German submarines, ships and to shoot down German planes, has been sent to the bottom of the Atlantic.

There is no way to talk around this incident. The Reuben James was not like the Greer, which was hit but not sunk. The Reuben James was hit and sunk. "War," says Webster, "is the state or fact of exerting force or violence against another government."

The United States is exerting force against Germany in all the ways at its command. Its ships and planes are in active battle service in the Atlantic, and there may be a clash at any time in one of the other oceans. Its people are using their resources to bring about the downfall of the economic and political order Adolf Hitler and the Nazis are trying to build. Its production machinery and workmen are being used day and night to turn out a swelling stream of armament to be used against Germany.

The moral issues of the war may still be undecided in many minds. The determination of policy by congress may still be a subject of debate. But meanwhile the fact is that the United States is engaged in World war II as a combatant, different only in the degree of its belligerency from Great Britain, Russia, Germany and Italy, all of which are clearly engaged in war.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, November 4

A very active and interesting day is the forecast made from the prevailing lunar and mutual aspects. Matters may move under excellent impetus for accomplishment in unusual or extraordinary lines of creative expression where the urges and talents seem to seek unique forms. It may be a day for going it alone along such channels as but little support or encouragement should be looked for from friends, superiors or employers.

Those whose birthday it is may enjoy a year in which some rather unusual or exceptional talents of a lofty creative form may blossom into rich as well as lucrative expression. This may relate to poetry, music, art, drama or romantic or mystery fiction, in which the intuitions, imagination or a flair for the fantastic may seek practical manifestation. It is distinctly a time for "going it alone" and with confidence.

A child born on this day should be energetic and ambitious, especially in the expression of a rather unique or extraordinary talent in which the intuition, imagination or inspirational faculties seek practical form.

"MAINTENANCE DIET" IS OUTLINED

Keep Weight Normal, Suggests Dr. Clendening

can begin now and then go back to the others. Copies of a pamphlet on "A Three-Weeks Reducing Diet" will be mailed on request, enclosing ten cents.

The final week's diets are a little lower in caloric value than the former ones, because we want you to lose as much as possible while you are on a strict schedule. As I have said before, the benefits of dieting come not so much gradually or continuously, but in jumps, usually at the end of ten days or three-week periods.

To repeat once more, you are not supposed to go on a spree after this diet period is over, and eat anything you want. If you are the dangers of dieting, but this doctrine is largely used by overweights to give themselves comfort for not dieting. Certainly people who are normal weight or underweight should not diet "to preserve their figures." But the people you hear about who ran into a decline from dieting usually had a basis of tuberculosis to begin with.

Dr. James J. Short of New York, who recently reported the reduction of a patient from 470 to 175 pounds, nailed this fallacy by saying—"there is no limitation to the amount of excess weight that can be removed with safety." If a reducing diet furnishes the proper balance of vitamins, minerals and proteins, and the patient really needs it, it is safe.

overweight and have a "tendency" to fat, it is ten to one that the "tendency" is due to eating too much. So plan your future eating habits on the basis of a "maintenance diet," avoiding the excessive use of the fattening foods which are sugar, candy, bread, cereal, macaroni, spaghetti, pastries, pies, cakes, potatoes, beans, corn, butter, gravies, salad oils, cream soups and meats high in fat—such as pork, lamb, chops and bacon.

Cut Down Fats
You need not cut these out altogether, but go easy on them. One slice of bread with a light coating of butter is enough at any meal for anybody. And a garnishing of gravy rather than a drowning of it.

Enough. The same applies to salad dressings and cream sauces. Of course, it is the fats that give most taste to foods, and the temptation is very great, but remember Jack Sprat is always represented in the pictures as being thin, and that is a sound physiologic deduction.

The worst habit the overweight gets into is not to quit eating when he's satisfied. Overweights kid themselves about this; they say they really do not eat as much as the normal weights. But they forget the second helpings, or the little clean-up manoeuvre with the extra piece of bread. Mrs. Sprat was undoubtedly the one who licked the platter clean. Don't push your appetite.

Can Reduce Safely
You will hear a great deal about terials too their surface. Charcoal is largely adsorbent or gases, so can be used in gaseous stomach, and intestinal conditions. It has no effect on the blood.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendening has seven pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. For any one pamphlet desired, send 10 cents in coin, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, 235 E. 45th st., New York. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

BARRED 7 SEVENS by MARYSE RUTLEDGE

CHAPTER THIRTY-THREE

Fan ran to Mat, pulling at him; she was still warm. "Please, please, please, Mat—not this—"

"I couldn't see him. She had no light." Then her frenzied face staring wildly down, she saw the envelope. It was fastened to the under side of the overturned bench; the bench had been under the door.

She could go anywhere in it. She used to say to Garrison, "I'll be back in a minute." It was Garrison's hand. It was Garrison's hand that had written the message to Mat—or to Garrison. Yes, to Garrison.

For on its surface was written in Garrison's hand: "For Dick, the newspaperman." "For Dick, the newspaperman."

Fan opened, tense, and in the silence over ears seemed, also, to be listening as the night slid away. She stared out of the window, as she had done on hour ago.

It was a Park dressed, under an October sky. How had he got back here? How had he escaped? Where was the man who would presently knock on the door, demanding entrance, and find her there, splintered with his hands? What did it matter?

She listened. Someone had come into the foyer. There was no sound, but she felt an ominous presence. It couldn't be Doremus. Mechanically, she bent, still holding the envelope, and took up the sword.

"Who's there?" She prayed it would be Dick Garrison. Dave Farland, or the newspaperman, Bill Wright.

The hand with the envelope went to her breast. A man was framed in the doorway, his jaw and shoulders jutting out. He grinned at her across the narrow room.

"Go easy, sister," he said. His hand eyes took in the scene. He chuckled. His thumb jerked toward Breaun. "You've spared a lot of people a heap of trouble. Congratulations!" He was staring at the sword in Fan's hand.

She dropped it, as if the stained blade scorched her. She had seen this man before. He was Fred Sweitzer. It was he who had once known Carlie; who had knocked David out in Fan's apartment; and she had beaten poor Anna to death. Sweitzer's greedy eyes were now on the envelope. He held out his hand, holding a "Gavel."

"I want to kill him," he said. "I want to kill him." "I want to kill him," he said. "I want to kill him."

"No," Fan said suddenly. "No!" And she moved away.

"If you know what's good for you, yes, girlie," Sweitzer took her time. This was easy.

But Fan said, "No," again, loudly, as if she expected help. Sweitzer rounded let her live after that.

His voice roughened as he sipped after her. "Come on, Gavel!"

Fan looked at his bulky, advancing figure, and ran behind the other piano. Its curves sheltered her for a second. Desperately, she looked around the room for another refuge. The carved furniture, damask Italian chests, offered no security.

If she could only gain time! Her mouth was dry and stiff as she smiled the smile that won over so many men. "Let's have a drink first. You'll find the makings in the pantry." She added, "You and I could be friends over a drink, Sweitzer." Then she bit her lip. She never should have let him know she recognized him.

His square head lunged forward between his wide shoulders. "Well, what later," he said. He moved around the curve of the piano, grabbing the one where Breaun lay crumpled and so very still.

Fan dodged. Then the cruel game began, between her and the big, muscle-totter man in that familiar suit, where once she had been so sure. No matter how fleet she was, he was in her stained white, he was over her, almost jolting her to the ground; then after and then, feeling his big hairy hand on her.

She thought of the windows. She might reach one of them and jump, rather than give him Carlie's secret. But he divined her rush, and blocked the way. The door, then, to the dining room—or to the foyer. He was there.

But now he wasn't grinning any more. His eyes were sinister. He was on the kill. And gradually he closed in.

Fan held the envelope behind her, arching back, but it was no use. Sweitzer seized her, twisting her limp wrist. The envelope fell. He picked it up; thrust it into his pocket.

"I hate to do this," he said, and his coarse face softened as he looked at Fan. "You and I might go places. If it weren't for my boss. But it's got to be a suicide party—"

"He dragged her, unresisting, over to Breaun, and dipped for the sword. "We'll leave the details to the cops."

He held the sword awkwardly, while gripping the terrorized woman. It was a furtive creak from the dining room that released Fan. Doremus had come home. She saw his brown face staring in at them.

"Doremus!" she shrieked. She wrenched the thin blade from Fred Sweitzer, pointing it at him.

"Oh, Lawd!" murmured Doremus, his rolling white stare on his dead master. Then he was kneeling there, moaning.

Fan stood protectively over them, her steady hand with the sword, ready to thrust. "Get out of here, Sweitzer!" she cried.

Sweitzer stepped back from her. He had, after all, the envelope for which his boss had sent him. The door slammed after him.

Doremus rose slowly from his knees. His grief flattened his face. "You done kill Mistuh Breaun," he said to Fan. He never took his eyes off the sword she held.

"No—no, Doremus, I didn't." Tears rolled from her eyes. She let the sword drop.

Sweitzer had escaped. Knuckles pounded on the front door.

Jane Rider closed her eyes, on the early Sunday train headed for Haverstraw. She never wanted to see David Farland again after the hysterical scene Fan Rubley had made at the party. Why did David have to leave with that woman?

It wasn't Breaun's fault. He had put himself out to give Jane a wonderful time in bringing her to Richard Garrison's lovely place, among delightful guests. Then suddenly everything had been spoiled.

She hadn't been quite fair to Breaun in running off with Bill Wright. But Bill had coaxed her, and it really had been fun—in a way—to dash in and out of gay clubby spots she had never seen before. Yet under the surface of Bill's easy manner, Jane had felt his thoughts wandering.

Later, when they were having breakfast, Wright had looked drawn and worried. Patting her hand, he said, "You're a swell kid! Don't get David wrong. This terrible business of Carlie's murder is going to break soon. David wants to keep you out of it."

"I'm not a child." Her voice had been petulant.

Bill had sounded grave. "That isn't the question, Jane. I can't explain. But I do ask you to keep away from anyone you don't know very well. What about that writer chap Helm who lives opposite you? See much of him?"

Why had Bill asked that? Jane gave a glance at the passing landscape—every acre carrying her nearer home. Her old distrust of Kurt Helm flashed in and out of her mind. What harm could there have been in telling Bill all that Kurt had done for her? Getting her a job with the Givens; something worth while and apparently patriotic. Yes, she had told Bill all about it, ending bitterly:

"After all, David and I might have been happy if we hadn't been dragged into this murder. If Slagan hadn't fired David, and the library hadn't politely given me a vacation, because of all the publicity, we needn't have got mixed up with so many people. We could have minded our own business."

Well, there was no sense in tormenting herself. . . . Haverstraw and home at last.

Jane ran up the path, calling, "Mother!" Timmy, the pup, galloped around the side of the house, ecstatic in welcome. Mrs. Rider flung open the front door. Her arms welcomed Jane.

Then, surprisingly, Ed Blagden strolled out in his trooper's uniform. "I dropped in," he offered, a shade too casually. "Thought you might be home this morning."

"Oh, I'm so glad to be back!" Jane cried. "Is there any coffee ready, Mother?"

There was, also a fresh supply of Mrs. Rider's famous popovers. They went back into the sunny kitchen. Ed sat down opposite Jane at the gleaming table. He crossed his long legs.

"You had us plenty bothered Jane," he said abruptly.

Jane gave him a startled glance. Her mother straightened from the stove. "Leave the child alone, Ed," she rebuked. "I knew she was all right." But her eyes gave her away. She hadn't known. "You see, dear, Mr. Garrison called up very late last night. He—"

Jane pushed back her coffee cup and sprang up. "I can't see why he did," she said, flushing. "Bill Wright and I—your remember Bill, Mother—left the party early. We visited several night—restaurants and had a most enjoyable time."

Ed Blagden hooked his fingers in his belt and rose. "Where was Farland?"

"Why he—?" Jane faltered. "And Mattie Breaun?" The trooper's eyes were hard.

Mrs. Rider objected. "Can't you see Jane's tired, Ed?"

Jane said gaily. "It's all right, Mother."

Ed patted her on the shoulder. "Forget it." He grinned lop-sidedly. "I'll be seeing you." He stooped to pat Timmy, and went out.

Jane felt as if she would never get enough sleep, but she was awake at six Monday morning. The telephone rang at seven. She answered, her mother anxiously beside her. It was David. His voice sounded husky and far away. Jane listened a long time, her knuckles whitening on the receiver. Then she said, "You must stick by Fan, David. Don't come out here." She hung up.

She turned to her mother. "Something dreadful has happened. Mother. Mr. Breaun was found dead, in his apartment, late last night. And they've arrested Fan Rubley; found her there—red-handed." Jane tried to swallow, couldn't. "She says he killed himself because the FBI men were after him for something or other. She says she told Attorney Garrison what he was doing. She says—"

Jane couldn't go on. She was shaking from head to foot.

"Don't get yourself all upset, darling," Mrs. Rider pleaded, looking at Jane's feverish cheeks. She was herself, deeply shocked. Mr. Breaun had seemed such a nice man.

"Please, Mother, leave me alone for a while," Jane ran up to her room. She didn't answer when David telephoned later. Mrs. Rider took the call.

Sigma Phi Sorority Plans Annual Barn Dance Tuesday

Final plans have been made and decorations completed for the third annual Beta Sigma Phi sorority barn dance Tuesday night at the Salem Country club. Members of Beta Phi chapter and their guests will attend the affair.

Mrs. S. M. Moore is president of the chapter and Mrs. H. Rex Hundertmark is general chairman. Her committee includes Mrs. Walter Ferrall, refreshments; Miss Martha Krauss, program; Mrs. Kenneth Pinkerton, tickets.

Special square dances will be held, and "Paul Jones" will be called. Other features will be a cake walk and a grand march to judge the best farmer and farmerette costumes. Prizes will be given for the costumes for the other special events.

Officers Elected by Junior Auxiliary

The American Legion Junior auxiliary, at a business meeting preceding a Halloween party Saturday afternoon at the Legion home, elected officers, with Frances Sechler as president, succeeding Maybelle Huston.

Other officers are: Vice president, Elaine Sarbin; secretary, Shirley Sarbin; treasurer, Lucy Huston; chaplain, Kay Holzbach; sergeant-at-arms, Frances Sharp.

The retiring president named Norma Cunningham and Shirley Sarbin as a committee to have charge of a candy benefit, funds from which will be used for relief work.

The room was decorated with candles, pumpkin faces and other Halloween decorations for the masquerade party. A prize for the cleverest costume went to Glenna Lee Harris. Prizes in the contests were won by Bernice Cunningham, Kay Holzbach, Shirley Baldinger, Frances Sharp and Lucy Huston.

The committees in charge included: Program, Frances Sharp and Lucy Huston; refreshments, Elaine Sarbin and Kay Holzbach.

Announce Engagement of Miss Gamble

Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Gamble of R. D. 3, Salem announce the engagement of their daughter, C. Rebecca, to Robert Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ward of S. Ellsworth ave. A date for the wedding has not been set.

Announcement was made at a family party Saturday night at the Gamble home.

Miss Gamble, a graduate of the Friends boarding school at Barnesville in 1937, is a graduate of the Salem City Hospital Nurses Training school. Mr. Ward, a graduate of Salem High school in 1938, is employed by the Electric Furnace Co.

Guests Entertained by Mrs. Matsuck

Guests during the weekend at the home of Mrs. Helen Matsuck, 13 Third st., included Mrs. John Polachek, Miss S. M. Delvaux, Miss Margaret Claybaugh, Miss Nellie Savitsky and Miss Mary Danesi of Chardon, Pa.

At a dinner Saturday night at the home, Mrs. Matsuck was presented a gift by Mrs. Polachek. The table was arranged with Irish linen cloth and centerpiece of American Beauty roses and lighted by tall white tapers. Dancing and singing were features of the evening.

Mrs. Coe Hostess to Methodist Group

Group 6 of the Methodist Women's Society of Christian Service, with Mrs. L. W. Sanders as leader, will meet at the home of Mrs. R. C. Coe, 1006 Jennings ave., at 2 p. m. Thursday.

Associate hostess will be Mrs. W. E. Rogers. Mrs. Donald Matthews will be in charge of the program. Members desiring transportation are asked to notify Mrs. Sanders.

Miss Thexton Hostess at Halloween Fete

Lets Catherine Thexton was hostess to 14 friends at a Halloween masquerade party Friday night at her home on W. Fifth st. Games and contests, followed by lunch, were features. The table was attractive with Halloween favors and large lighted lanterns as a centerpiece. Ann Powrie of Youngstown was a guest.

Four Brothers In Presbyterian Ministry

Dr. Clarence Edward Macartney of Pittsburgh, who will speak at the Father & Son banquet at the First Presbyterian church at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, is one of four brothers who have been successful in the Presbyterian ministry. They are the sons of the late Dr. J. L. Macartney, one of the founders, and for many years a professor, of Geneva college at Beaver Falls, Pa.

Pictured above, and reading from left to right, the brothers are: Dr. Albert J. now pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian church, Washington, D. C.; Dr. Ernest L. now retired, who lives at Upland, Calif.; Dr. Clarence Edward, and Dr. J. Robertson, pastor of the Palm Springs, Calif., church.

Several hundred persons are expected to attend the banquet tomorrow evening, one in a series of events scheduled during the seven week program which is expected to witness the clearing of the church debt.

Wedding Anniversary Is Observed

A surprise party was given for Mr. and Mrs. Martin Weber, Sr., at their home on Sharp ave. last evening honoring their 29th wedding anniversary.

A family supper was arranged by their children, with open house during the evening for friends and neighbors. Cards and dancing were enjoyed.

The table was arranged attractively for the supper with a centerpiece of red roses and white pom-poms and a white anniversary cake marking the couple's places. Mr. and Mrs. Weber received a number of gifts.

The children and their families, who attended the celebration, are: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Moser and daughter, Alice Kay; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zamarelli, Mrs. Eugene Bradley and son, Dawngene, Misses Tillie Hilda and Helen Weber, Martin, Jr., and Edward Weber.

HOPE WANING FOR SHIP SURVIVORS

Heaviest Casualty List Since Maine Sinking Is Feared

Destroyer Jacob Jones, torpedoed in 1917, had the heaviest loss of life—64 men. Another destroyer, the Chauncey, had 22 killed in a World war collision.

A collision also sent the Submarine F-1 to the bottom in 1917 with a loss of 19 men. The fourth World war loss was the Cruiser San Diego which was sunk by a mine off Fire Island, with the loss of five men. The only loss since then was the Gunboat Panay, bombed and machine gunned by Japanese planes in China in 1937, when two were killed.

When last night passed without additional reports on the casualties of the Reuben James, hopes began to decline. It was recalled that the U. S. S. Kearny, badly damaged by a torpedo attack on Oct. 17, was able to supplement her initial report of the action by radioing a list of casualties 48 hours later, whereas more than 72 hours had passed without further word from the Reuben James.

Since the Reuben James was traveling in a convoy, there were chances that survivors might have been picked up by merchantmen who, preserving radio silence, would not report until they made harbor.

Informed quarters held the view that Germany would not ask Japan at this time to invoke the Axis pact under which these countries and Italy agreed to aid one another in case of attack by a power not involved in the European or Far eastern conflicts.

The Japanese press meanwhile stressed the gravity of Japanese-American relations, which Asahi said were "the worst in history." Yomiuri and Kokumin followed a similar vein, warning that "there's a limit of Japanese patience."

MORE VIEWS ON TAXES

Editor, The News:
Every paper we pick up just before election time is full of appeals for taxes and more taxes.

Pity the poor tax payer. It makes them feel like they would like to vanish in thin air as the saying goes or find some island in an out-of-the-way place where there would be no taxes to pay—and then perhaps Hitler or some of his buddies might select the location for an air base.

We feel sure there is not one person who is engaged in agriculture who is not willing to pay their full share of the taxes necessary to make our country a decent place in which to live. The farmers as a class have always been that way, but we would like to live in a little peace and security without having to shorten our lives and ruin our health in order to keep our heads above water. Perhaps it does not impose so much hardship on some owners of real estate that have other sources of income, but with the ones who have to depend entirely on the farm it is a different story.

We believe that is where classification comes in. Our only recourse now is to use our vote. It is the only weapon we have, and we say to all the tax payers to go to the polls and use it. We insist there are other ways that can be worked out for providing enough tax which would be more fair and now is the time it should be done.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE for MAYOR

General Election, Tuesday, Nov. 4, 1941

TO THE SALEM VOTERS:
May I take this opportunity to call your attention to my candidacy for the office of MAYOR OR SALEM?

I have held Public Office, both township and county. I do not feel it is necessary for me to dwell upon my qualifications for the office I am seeking, but I am willing to have my record speak for itself.

My only Campaign Promise is my solemn PLEDGE if elected—to work for the best interest of our City. I will make an honest effort to solve the troublesome problems that have confronted us for some time, namely the WATER, SEWER and TRAFFIC situations—these things can and must be remedied.

BOOK WEEK COMES OF AGE . . .

The first observance of Book Week—1919—was built around the theme "More Books in the Home". For 1941 the slogan is "Forward with Books". If we say "Children's Book Week" it is only because we mean books for growing minds—are one or one-hundred-one! Our happiest ambition at our book shop is to help you to the books that will mean to you profit or enjoyment—we sincerely hope both at the same time. How about a "Book Christmas", this year?

Chrysler Standards Maintained Despite Defense Priority Calls On Materials

DE SOTO BUILDERS LIST NEW STYLES

Concealed Headlights One of 59 New Features On Noted Car

Stylish to stay in vogue not only this year, but for years to come, two series of new De Sotos have been introduced this fall to Salem motorists by Wiggers Sales and Service, 166 S. Ellsworth ave. One series is called the de luxe, the other, the custom.

In the new models, the De Soto division of Chrysler corporation has placed emphasis also on such time-factors as long-life engineering, operating economy and safety.

Most powerful ever planned under a De Soto hood is the car's new high compression engine, output of which has been stepped up to 115 horsepower. Christened the "Power-master," it is believed by De Soto engineers to be the most economical engine of its rating yet developed.

Add 59 New Features

Also, near the head of a list of 59 new features are highly styled "rocket" bodies, with concealed running boards and a concealed headlight; "personalized interiors," which give owners the widest selection they've ever had of smart color combinations and materials; "no-shift" driving through use of an improved version of fluid drive with semiautomatic transmission, available on all models at moderate extra cost; "safeguard wheels," that won't permit a flat tire to be thrown off the rim and many innovations and refinements that add to the car's long life and to the comfort and safety of those who ride in it.

where and keynoting De Soto's advanced streamlined styling are the car's new concealed "air-foil" headlights. Scaled beam lights have been recessed into the fenders where they're concealed and protected in daytime behind sliding steel panels which, when closed, blend smoothly into the fender contours.

Both the panels and the lights are controlled by a small lever just below the instrument board. Pulling the lever opens the panels, turns on the lights. Pushing it closes them, turns the lights off.

De Soto's new front-end is distinctive and more impressive-looking than ever. A wider, heavier bumper, extending farther around the sides of the car, accentuates its husky appearance. Gravel shields give bumpers a "built-in" look. Rugged bumper guards bracket the license plates.

Particularly noticeable is the smoothness of De Soto's design. Not only have the headlights disappeared, but also have the running boards. Overall height is low—only 67½ inches. Yet there's been no sacrifice of interior head room.

Vitamins Needed As Aid to Vision

Vitamin A helps human beings to have better vision in two ways. First, it serves as a chemical tool for the normal activity of body cells, including those of the eye. Second, it enters into the composition of the magical light-sensitive pigment in the retina of the eye that facilitates the transformation of light impulses into nerve impulses.

This substance, called "visual purple" because of its color, coats the nerve endings in the retina of the eye, says N. R. Pettay, optometrist specialist, with offices at Art's jewelry store.

Like the film on a photographic plate, the "visual purple" changes its chemical composition when light shines upon it. This change causes nerve impulses which, when transmitted to the brain, cause visual sensations.

Unlike the film on a photographic plate, the visual purple in the human eye ordinarily can change back very quickly to its original composition. Vitamin A is needed to affect such regeneration. If this vitamin is lacking in the diet, the eyes have difficulty in seeing clearly after being subjected to strong light.

CONSERVE RUBBER AND HELP DEFENSE

Jump and jerk, stop and squeak driving is strictly out of fashion nowadays. Sudden starts and last-minute stops waste tire rubber, and conservation of rubber is an all-important item owing to sharply curtailed production brought about by the national defense program.

Seiberling Rubber company, represented locally by the Smith garage on Third st., points out that wheels spin on pavements when a car is started suddenly, while rubber is wasted in precipitous stops owing to the sliding of wheels over the road. So to conserve rubber, be reasonable, whenever possible, in both starting and stopping your car.

NEW METHODS OF BUILDING CITED

Ingenuity of Engineers Replaces Goods Needed By Defense

With the whole industrial world talking "priorities," it is natural that the public should ask just what changes have been necessary in the materials used in the 1942 cars, what effect these changes will have on the performance, economy and longevity of the product, and what savings have been effected in essential defense materials. This question, insofar as it applies to the new Chrysler cars, is answered in detail in the following statement issued by the engineering department of the Chrysler corporation:

The term alternate or "substitute" in reality is a misnomer when applied to those materials which have come out of the recent efforts of Chrysler Corporation's laboratory engineers. Materials which have been "substituted," in many cases not only have more pleasing appearance, but have better physical properties, are more easily produced and provide better performance. Their adaptation to various automobile parts represents an accelerated progress which would have been accomplished by Chrysler corporation engineers in due course of time as part of their regular job.

Plastics Are Used

Aluminum has been very adequately replaced in the engine front end oil seal plate by a plastic, with steel inserts used for the thread. These plastic plates do a good job of sealing, allow exceptionally good production control, and are 40 per cent lighter than the aluminum plates, even with the increased thickness.

Door handles, formerly made of zinc die castings, have been redesigned to be made of thermoplastic material injection molded around a steel insert used to give strength. These plastic door handles are attractively blended with the interior color scheme and have the advantage that they suffer no loss of strength at sub-normal temperatures.

The direction signal switch housings have been replaced with stamped steel in plastics. Clutch torque shaft bearings, formerly zinc die cast, have been redesigned to use a molded plastic.

Some years ago, zinc die cast glove box doors on Chrysler cars were replaced with a phenolic resin molded with a filler. This laminated plastic is stronger, will not take permanent set so readily, can be artificially grained just as easily, and to casual observation cannot be distinguished from the material it replaces.

New Type Steering Wheels

All-plastic steering wheels are now being used on Chrysler-built models, replacing rubber, zinc, and stainless steel, releasing these vital materials for defense applications. Instrument panel medallions, which were previously made from an alloy of tin, copper, and zinc, may be made of a molded acrylic resin plastic. These parts are embossed and colored on the back surface to give an attractive three-dimensional effect.

The cork gaskets on the oil pan, side and front, and on the valve cover plate can be replaced by ligno-synthetic rubber gaskets; and copper asbestos gaskets may be replaced with steel asbestos.

To continue citing every instance for which optional materials are being considered for use in the automobile would be an endless task. Suffice to say that the Chrysler corporation has made a thorough study and examination of every single part and material which goes into its passenger cars and trucks and has determined to an exhaustive extent every way that critical materials can be replaced. Through-out this program the Chrysler corporation engineering department has persevered in its demands that the quality and performance of Chrysler corporation products should, as always, be held up to the highest of standards.

CARE ADDS MILES TO CAR'S SERVICE

Sinclair Offers Special Service As Means of Cutting Repairs

Keeping your present car in good shape will help it to last longer—to run better. In this way you'll not only save vital metals, rubber, gasoline and other products needed for national defense, you'll save yourself some money, too, states H. R. de Malignon, local agent for the Sinclair Refining company.

You'll need fewer repairs and fewer new parts and you'll find you will get more mileage from your gasoline. And perhaps you can run the car as much as two or three years longer than usual before you trade it for a new one.

Offer Some Tips

With these thoughts in mind, Sinclair dealers are offering you the following simple, easy-to-do tips on how to prolong the life of your present car:

Keep your car in proper mechanical adjustment. This calls for a motor tune-up, wheel alignment check, headlight check, brake test, etc., at regular intervals—whether you think you need a check-up or not.

Keep motor oil and crankcase filled to proper level on oil gauge with recommended grade.

Keep correct grade lubricant in transmission and differential housing at proper level at all times.

Have chassis lubricated at regular intervals—at least every 1,000 miles. A well-lubricated chassis prevents wear of parts and tires.

Don't neglect to have anti-freeze put in the radiator before the first freezing weather hits your locality. A cracked radiator or motor block may be hard to replace in these times.

Check Tires Weekly

Keep tires fully inflated and checked weekly. Switch their position (diagonally from front to rear) at 5,000 mile intervals.

To give your car longer life, it should be lubricated not only at regular intervals, but lubricants themselves should be changed in the spring and fall. Don't expect summer grade lubricants to protect your car in winter weather.

Right now, before winter strikes its hardest blows, have your car prepared for cold weather driving. To do this job, Sinclair dealers offer you a special Sinclair-ize-for-winter service.

Two Massillon Boys Coach Ohio And Wisconsin For Big Battle

Brown, Stuhldreher Head Big Ten Teams That Meet Saturday At Ohio State

By FRITZ HOWELL.
COLUMBUS, Nov. 3.—Two Western conference coaches who were graduated from the same small-town high school and their teams against each other Saturday at Ohio State in the No. 1 game on the Buckeye state's 22-game week-end collegiate grid program.

The coaches are Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin and Paul E. Brown of Ohio State. Not only did both play their high school football at Massillon, where Brown also gained the coaching fame that sent him to the Buckeye helm but they were the two smallest players ever to grace the Tiger regular lineup.

Stuhldreher, as if you didn't know, later was one of the famed "Four Horsemen" of Notre Dame under Knute Rockne, while Brown, after a freshman fling at Ohio State football, shifted to Miami for his college career.

Stuhldreher, following his All-America days at Notre Dame, coached at Villanova for 11 years before going to Wisconsin, where he now is director of athletics and football mentor. Brown, after graduating from Miami, spent the next 11 years as a high school coach.

Band Will Perform
Massillon High school's famed band is due to perform on the stadium turf Saturday, in a salute to its two illustrious alumni. The Stark county clan claims its two favorites are the only major college coaches in the country graduated from the same high school. About 55,000 are expected to sit in on the game.

While the Big Ten contest dominates the picture, several other top-flight games are on the weekend slate. Among them is the Case-Baldwin Wallace scrap at Berea, which Case must win to retain the State of Ohio conference leadership and its spot as the only unbeaten and untied club inside the Buckeye borders.

Penguins Meet Zippers
Youngstown, second place in the state with six wins and a tie, faces a tartar Friday night in Akron's Zippers—the club that handed Ohio Wesleyan its first defeat Saturday, 28 to 6, knocking the Bishops out of the pace-setting role.

Other games, all scheduled Saturday, are:
Marietta at Capital, Ohio Northern at Mount Union, Bowling Green at Wittenberg, Oberlin at Wooster, John Carroll at Kent State and Ashland at Kenyon, all in the Ohio conference, Carnegie Tech at Cincinnati, Western Reserve at Miami, Ohio U. at Ohio Wesleyan, Butler at Toledo, Muskingum at Washington and Jefferson, Bethany at Denison, Heidelberg at Elmhurst, Pennsylvania at Otterbein, DeSales at St. Mary's, Rio Grande at West Liberty, Teachers, Bluffton at DePauw, Kentucky State college at Wilberforce, and Evansville at Findlay.

Next Sunday, Dayton meets Xavier at Cincinnati, with the state scoring leadership and third place in the state-wide standings at stake. Each has won six and lost one while Xavier has scored 133 points to 177 for Dayton.

EASIER SCHEDULE LOOMS SATURDAY FOR COLLEGIANS

Teams Relax Before Final Drive of Football Season Begins

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The country's football teams, worn out by fighting potent opposition and adverse weather conditions last week, relax a bit this Friday and Saturday before starting the final drive to the season's end.

Although almost all of the 19 teams which remain unbeaten and untied snap into action, a pair of elevens with a tie to their discredit tangle in the coming program's foremost game, Notre Dame vs. Navy at Baltimore.

The Midshipmen sloshed to a 13 to 6 triumph over previously-unbeaten Pennsylvania, while the mud and a hard-hitting Army eleven held Notre Dame to a scoreless draw in their twenty-eighth meeting last Saturday.

Fifteen of the country's unbeaten and untied machines slipped to the side in the grime and mud that characterized the Saturday play throughout the east and much of the middle west.

The six major perfect teams, divided geographically, are:
East—Fordham, Duquesne, Middle West—Minnesota.
South—Duke.
Southwest—Texas and Texas A. & M.
Pacific coast—None.

They are all busy this week-end with Fordham at Pittsburgh, Duquesne at St. Mary's, Minnesota entertaining Nebraska, Duke taking on Davidson, Texas playing Baylor and Texas A. & M. going against Southern Methodist.

The program by sections includes:
East
Fordham, 17 to 0 victor over feared Purdue, now has only Pittsburgh, St. Mary's and New York university threatening a perfect record—and a bowl bid. Harvard, which got by Princeton, 6 to 4, takes on the Army crew that held Notre Dame, and Princeton enters Dartmouth, 3 to 0 victim of William and Mary. Yale, beaten by Brown, is at Cornell, loser to Columbia, 7 to 0, on Paul Governali's long run.

Midwest
Minnesota's cripples will attempt to hand Nebraska its fourth straight setback, and Northwestern hopes to forget its 8 to 7 loss to the Gophers against Indiana. Michigan, 20 to 0 winner over Illinois, is idle. Iowa, surprise 13 to 7 winner over Bo McMillin's aggregation, meets Illinois, and Purdue goes against Michigan State, whipped 19 to 0 by Missouri. Ohio State, victor over Pitt, plays Wisconsin.

Far West
Stanford, apparently clicking again, invades Southern California, which rested last Saturday. The Rose Bowl champions defeated Santa Clara, 27 to 7, showing little resemblance to the team that lost to Oregon State early in the season. California, also a 27 to 7 winner but with UCLA as the victim, enters Washington, whose huskies stopped Montana, 21 to 0. Oregon State, master of Idaho by 33 to 0, descends on UCLA.

Barons Win Two More
The Cleveland Barons, defending champions of the American Hockey league, captured both of their weekend meetings with the young and powerful Buffalo Bisons.

The Barons took Saturday night's game at Cleveland, 2 to 1, and then went to Buffalo, where they licked the Bisons last night, 4 to 2, before 10,839 spectators.

SAN FRANCISCO—That interlocking black and olive drab finish on army vehicles is part of the army's camouflage system, Col. F. J. Riley, quartermaster supply officer at Fort Mason, disclosed. The "shine" is taken out of the enamel with which the vehicles are painted.

Army Stops An Irish Drive On Rain-Soaked Gridiron

Fullback Evans, of Notre Dame, is dropped without a gain by Hill, of the Army, in the annual Army-Notre Dame grid classic played at the Yankee Stadium in a downpour which made the going tough for both teams. The battle ended in a scoreless tie.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
NEW YORK, Nov. 3.—The week's gridiron hero, if you ask us, wasn't Minnesota's Bud Higgins, nor even those Ivy league punters who averaged 40 yards or so a crack with a soggy ball to keep the upsets from being more upsetting, but the groundskeeper at the Polo Grounds takes on the Army crew that held Notre Dame, and Princeton enters Dartmouth, 3 to 0 victim of William and Mary. Yale, beaten by Brown, is at Cornell, loser to Columbia, 7 to 0, on Paul Governali's long run.

While Larry MacPhail has been making the pro Dodgers practice in tennis shoes to keep his turf from being ruined, the Polo Grounds stood for clouds all week and three games during the week-end, two of them in pouring rain.

Latest addition to the baseball rumor is that the Yanks will bid for Ken Keltner because Red Rolfe is due to quit because of illness. Only trouble with that one is Rolfe would like to cut in on the World Series dough for a year or two more.

Brass Ring Dept.
Coach Hobbs Adams' daughter, who isn't old enough to be a Kansas State co-ed, worked out the figures on how K-State was improving and predicted her daddy's team would beat Nebraska. That 12-6 score should be her passing mark in the math exams when she enters college.

Monday Matinee
Fight folks hereabouts think Mike Jacobs had a swell idea about returning that Robinson-Zivie brawl Dec. 12 but Mike may run into a slight hitch because Robinson's board of strategy figures "Sugar" should cut into the heavy sugar this time. Four National Football league clubs have been looking over Tommy Coella, Canisius back, but the Buffalo Tigers of the American league hope to sign him first.

Today's Guest Star

Green Bay Packers Edge 'Invincible' Chicago Bears To Scramble Pro Standings

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Nov. 3.—The myth of the Chicago Bears' invincibility has been blasted to bits, so now National Football league teams can settled down to the business of deciding the professional championship.

Until Green Bay smacked the Bears over yesterday, 16 to 14, they were the talk of the country. Superlatives flooded the accounts of their games as coaches and writers acclaimed them as irresistible and unbeatable—the team of the decade.

Now that's all over and the Bears face a terrific fight for the championship they won a year ago. The pretenses to the throne included not only those pesky Packers, but also Washington and the New York Giants.

Washington trampled Pittsburgh, 23 to 3, yesterday, and assumed the eastern division lead, while the Giants bowed to the surging Chicago Cardinals, 10 to 7.

Rams Take Cellar
Detroit grouped Cleveland into the division cellar by whipping the Rams, 14 to 6, and Brooklyn defeated Philadelphia, 15 to 6.

The Giants, with two defeats, now face Detroit, Cleveland, Washington and Brooklyn. The Redskins must play Brooklyn, Bears, Green Bay and Philadelphia in addition to the Giants. The Bears in addition to the Redskins, play Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia and the Cardinals, while Green Bay plays only the Cards, Pittsburgh and Washington.

In case of a division tie the two teams must play for the right to meet the other sectional champion in the annual title battle.

Eastern Division
Clubs W. L. T. Per Cent
Washington 5 1 0 .86
New York 5 2 0 .82
Brooklyn 4 3 0 .82
Philadelphia 2 5 0 .67
Pittsburgh 0 7 0 .00

Western Division
Clubs W. L. T. Per Cent
Green Bay 7 1 0 .87
Chicago Bears 5 1 0 .83
Detroit 2 4 1 .59
Chicago Cards 2 4 1 .59
Cleveland 2 6 0 .89

MOBILE, Ala.—A lawyer who once described bonds of the Bankhead Tunnel under the Mobile river as "the greatest fraud ever perpetrated on the Treasury of the United States" must admit his error. REAL ESTATE

WE HAVE BEEN ORDERED TO SELL THIS FARM IMMEDIATELY!

This farm of 70 acres is located about five miles from Salem on improved road in good neighborhood. About half of land under cultivation, balance in pasture watered by spring. Very good six-room house which has electricity, furnace, well water, good cemented basement.

Large bank barn with strawshed, stanchions for nine cows. Other buildings include tile silo, chicken house, garage. This farm has been in the present owner's hands for many years and is being offered for sale at the low price of $5,500 only because of illness. Includes several hundred dollars' worth of standing timber. Bargains such as this are becoming fewer every day, so act at once if you are considering the purchase of a good farm.

In defeating the Barborton Eagles in a special match Saturday night on the Masonic alleys, the Salem Eagles' road team established the season's high team total of 2915 and a record single game of 1040.

The Salem Keglers opened with an 894 and stepped into a 981 in their second game. Ralph "Sarge" Gregg led the way with a 644 on games of 200, 197 and 247. Not far behind was Mike Hutter with 204, 206, 207—617.

At the same time the Salem Eagles ladies team defeated the Barborton Eagles 239 to 209. Old Ramsey setting the pace with 534.

On the Columbiana alleys the Grate Termites lost to the Columbiana Firestones by five pins, 2619 to 2605. George Hoover finished with a 250 for a total of 651, his first two games being 205 and 196. Earl Grate posted a 233 and a 251 for a 580 total, topped by Bill Hull's 590 on games of 199, 191 and 236.

In a postponed match in the Commercial league, the Recreation Billiards swept the series from the Amateur Pros.

15 In Running For Council Positions In Washingtonville

WASHINGTONVILLE, Nov. 3.—Two candidates for mayor, two for clerk and 15 for six council seats are giving this community a lively non-partisan election campaign.

When the smoke of battle has cleared away after next Tuesday's voting, one of these two will have been chosen mayor: Incumbent Lloyd Cullen, a machinist, at the Crescent Machine Co., who is seeking his third term, or Hazen P. Hunter, machine shop proprietor and operator, who twice before has been a candidate for the mayor's job.

Mrs. Martha Spear and Mrs. Martha Lindsay, widows, are rivals for the clerk's job. Mrs. Spear, a housekeeper, is seeking her second term at this office while Mrs. Lindsey, saleslady, is making her first political bid.

J. C. King is the lone candidate for treasurer. A cabinet maker at Mullins plant in Salem, he is the incumbent.

For council, a hot race is on among the following 15 candidates: Donald Spear, present councilman employee of Mullins Co.

Clarence Baker, foreman of the Standard Slog Co. of Youngstown, seeking re-election.

Leslie Tingle, welder, present councilman seeking second term. He is employed in Sebring.

Harry Wilkinson, political newcomer, employed in Youngstown.

Marvin Fieldhouse, employee of the Deming Co. of Salem, asking second term.

George Hall, incumbent, bidding for third term. He is a janitor at the Eagles club here.

John Saunders, Mullins Co. employee, first time out for public office.

Herbert Jacobson, new to politics, Mullins Co. employee.

Harold Rohrer, also newcomer and Mullins Co. employee.

Peter Queen Jr., employed at Mullins Co., seeks office for first time.

Emmett Longbottom, engineer on the Erie railroad. He has sought a council post before but never has been elected.

Here and There -- About Town

Crewson To Speak Here

Harry Crewson, Jr., teacher in Sebring High school, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Rotary club Tuesday noon in the Memorial building. He will be presented by R. S. McCulloch.

Crewson was instructor in history and sciences in Sebring High school until the summer of 1939, when he accepted a three-year appointment as instructor in the same subjects in the American university at Cairo, Egypt. His work there was cut short by the war and he returned home in June, 1940, to resume his work in Sebring High school.

His subject at the Rotary meeting will be "Egypt of Today."
